Twenty four young people have been elected to Hackney Youth Parliament to represent their peers over the next two years

THE YOUTH VOTE

A RECORD number of young people have voted in this year's Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) elections.

Some 7,441 youngsters – almost 50 per cent of the borough's 11 to 19-year-olds – voted in the weeks leading up to election day on 15 October. After months of writing manifestos, speaking at hustings and campaigning at schools and youth clubs, 24 young people were elected to represent their peers for the next two years.

While votes were being counted at Forest Road Young Hackney Centre by the Council's Electoral Services team, young people had the opportunity to question a panel of leaders from across the borough at the annual Mayor's Q&A, which marks Local Democracy Week.

The session was chaired by Sheila Durr, Hackney's Assistant Director of Children's Services. The panel included Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney; Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children's Services; Pauline Adams, Head of Service for Young Hackney; Chief Inspector Simon Crick; and Kennedy Nwosu, outgoing member of HYP.

Issues discussed included housing, employment, crime, work experience opportunities and lowering the voting age to 16.

Newly elected HYP member Beth Foster-Ogg, 17, of Clapton Girls' School, said: "I'm looking forward to working with the other members and talking to young people across Hackney."

"I'm keen to work on issues I care about, like housing, educating people about mental health and female genital mutilation. I also want to make young people more politically engaged."

Luke Odunaiké, 16, attends Young Hackney hub The Edge. He said: "I'm really excited to have been elected. I want to encourage young people to have the right mind set, to make sure they follow the right paths and access all the opportunities available for them."

The parliament meets every week and will start work on their first campaign in the coming months. Previous members include 'singing politician' and winner of BBC talent show 'The Voice', Jermain Jackman, and Ife Grillo, who represents Hackney in the national Youth Parliament and is currently working with the EU on youth campaigns.

Cllr Bramble said: "I'm delighted that so many people used their vote to make their voice heard in this important election, and I'm proud to have such politically engaged young people in Hackney. For those who've been elected, the hard work – and the fun – starts now. I'm looking forward to working with them over the next two years. I'm sure they'll achieve a great deal."

Sara Cox visits young residents from the Pembury Estate, E5, to talk about Threads – a fashion and textiles project

TV and radio presenter Sara Cox visited Pembury Estate, E5, to find out about a project which helps 10 to 18-year-olds develop skills to launch a career in the fashion industry.

Sara was being filmed for a celebrity special of BBC show 'The Great British Sewing Bee' in aid of Children in Need. As a guest host she went along to visit one of the projects benefiting from funds raised by the charity. Children in Need has donated more than £196,000 to the project, called Threads, over the past three years.

It is run by Peabody

“Threads is really great if you want to learn how to create garments and meet people of a similar age”

housing charity and it helps young women and girls, living in and around the estate, by offering one-to-one mentoring, support and trips.

Sara said: “I have seen for myself what Threads offers these young girls – not only the chance for them to form great friendships, but the opportunity for them to tap into their creative senses and learn new skills which can enable them to get a foot on the career ladder.”

Budding designer Charley-May, 15, said: “I’ve made everything from jumpers and dresses to a two-piece suit which is my favourite item of clothing. Threads is really great if you want to learn how to create garments and meet people of a similar age who like the same things as you.”

Since launching in 2011, 172 girls have registered with the project, 50 received an OCN Fashion Design accreditation, two found work experience in high-end fashion sales, two gained places at fashion college and six are excelling in GCSE textiles.

Threads meets from 4pm to 7.30pm, every Tuesday (13 to 18 years); and 11am-3pm, every Saturday (10 to 12 years) at the Pembury Learning Centre, 183 Dalston Lane.

‘The Great British Sewing Bee’ will be shown at 8pm on 23 October.

News in brief

Top architect David Adjaye to transform Mole Man’s house

WORLD famous architect David Adjaye has submitted plans to transform a property in Mortimer Road, N1, that was the former home of ‘Mole Man’.

Eccentric William Lyttle was dubbed the Mole Man after he dug a network of tunnels from his basement which extended up to 20 metres under surrounding streets and houses. The Council evicted him in 2006, over safety concerns, and 33 tons of debris, including three cars and a boat, were removed from the property, which he had inherited from his parents. Mr Lyttle died in 2010, aged 79.

The house (above) was bought for £1.12million by Tim Noble and Sue Webster in 2012. They commissioned Adjaye to remodel the property into a modern, family home retaining some of the Mole Man’s tunnels and creating a sunken garden. One of Adjaye’s best-known private residential projects, the Dirty House, can be seen in Shoreditch (below).

Get a free, limited edition designer tote bag when you shop local

SHOPPING locally is set to get even better this month with the release of a limited edition designer tote bag, which can be picked-up for free in 34 independent shops across Hackney.

As part of the ‘Love Hackney Shop Local’ campaign – aimed at encouraging people to support borough businesses – the bag, created by top designer James Long, will be available at businesses across Hackney from 25 October.

The reusable tote bags will be given away to shoppers who make a purchase in participating stores. The tote is an alternative to plastic bags, which are harmful to the environment and, in many cases, cannot be recycled. Plastic bags take up to 1,000 years to degrade and an estimated eight billion are thrown away in the UK every year.

Each participating shop has signed up to the ‘Love Hackney Shop Local’

Fashion designer James Long with his limited edition designer tote bags pledge, which means staff will not automatically give customers plastic carriers, but will offer the reusable bags instead.

Fashion designer James Long is known internationally with his clothing worn by Pharrell Williams, Usher and London-based rapper Tinie Tempah.

He said: “Living and working in Hackney means I spend a lot of time here and I am proud to support the amazing local businesses and people that make Hackney what it is.”

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, added: “By shopping in a local store you will be supporting local businesses, helping them to grow, become successful and employ residents.”

family learning festival 2014

18 October – 2 November

Free workshops and activities for you and your family!

Families are the first and most important teachers in children's learning. In the past, parents have told us that taking part in these activities has led to them gaining more confidence as well as them noting positive changes in their children too.

The Family Learning Festival is an annual event that promotes free, fun and informal learning activities taking place in children's centres, schools, libraries, museums and community learning venues all over Hackney.

A great opportunity for parents/carers and children to learn together and discover new talents and interests as well as having a great family day out!

Activities include:

- Natural hair workshop
- Pottery
- Baby Boogie
- Family Fitness, including Tai Chi
- Cupcake making
- Jewellery making
- Sewing

Take the rough with the smooth

By Rebecca Shahoud

LEE Valley VeloPark, in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, contains everything for the experienced cyclist and the novice biker.

The venue is divided into four parts: the velodrome, a BMX track, mountain bike trails and a one-mile road circuit. On 8 October I joined mountain bike and velodrome taster sessions.

Tour guide Matt McKormack fixed me up with a bike, helmet and gloves. The custom made British-built Condor has massive tyres which help to safely navigate rough terrain, and impressive suspension to help you land gently when racing over hills. There are five miles of outdoor mountain biking trails, full of texture and depth, to be explored. Steep climbs, rocky ridges, deep ruts, sharp turns and, weather permitting, a few muddy puddles to add to the excitement.

The damp weather made the track a little slippery so I rode slowly at first, picking up momentum as I became accustomed to the feel of the bike. There are three trails – blue, red and black – each with ascending degrees of difficulty.

It costs from as little as £4-6 per session. Riders are invited to bring their own mountain bike or hire one at the centre. The hour's session flies by.

I could have stayed all day, but I had to move swiftly on to the velodrome. After changing out of my muddy trousers, I'm led to the indoor track to experience another one-hour taster session. We walk past the immense BMX track, which has been remodelled since the London 2012 Olympics, to make it more suitable for beginners, while still retaining its suitability for professional races.

The velodrome's 250

metre Siberian pine track has seen cycling superstars such as Sir Chris Hoy, Laura Trott and Victoria Pendleton achieve gold medals for Team GB during the Olympics.

I am daunted by the scale and steepness of the track, but former time trial cyclist turned coach, Claire Lee, ensures our group that everything will go to plan if we stick to some rules.

It is the first time that anyone in our group has used a fixed-wheel bike, so for the first couple of laps, we got used to not stopping (there are no brakes) and slowing down by using pressure on the pedals.

It didn't take long to get familiar with the bike and build up enough speed to get to the higher parts of the steeply curved track. I could feel the sheer slant of the floor, which makes the ride both exhilarating and nerve-wracking.

I'm out of breath after a couple of laps. There's no relenting, you keep pushing onwards until you feel you have to slow down. It's an excellent workout and after the session, I'm full of adrenaline and endorphins.

There is also a one-mile road circuit, which stretches over the River Lea, that is perfect for children or inexperienced riders to learn the safety skills needed for busier routes. For the more competitive, there are riding clubs that meet regularly here. Pay and ride sessions to explore the circuit start from £2-6.

This half term, there are sessions for children and young people to try out two of the four tracks, with prices ranging from £25-30. Bikes and helmets are supplied, if needed.

Cycle app-y

FASCINATING data from a pioneering mobile app, which tracked more than 1,700 bike journeys across Hackney, has been revealed.

The Cycle Hackney app was launched in June and is the first of its kind in the UK. Cyclists use their phones to record their journeys, track their routes, and report problems directly to the Council using camera phones to upload pictures via a 'report it' function.

The information is used to help build better bike routes, including contra-flow systems; repair potholes; overcome barriers to biking; tackle cycle parking deficiencies; and understand why cyclists travel along certain routes.

App users are able to keep note of how many miles they have cycled, calories burned and how much carbon dioxide they have theoretically saved.

Ethan Ohs is a fan. He said: "Rather than having to put a cycle computer on my bike I can track my basic miles with little effort. I really like the report feature on the app – it's nice to be able to notify the Council of problems on a cycle route by just taking a picture on my phone, much better than having to remember where I was when I get home and write an e-mail or make a phone call."

“The aim of this app is to collect enough data to continue to make cycling in Hackney as easy and simple as possible”

The app has also revealed some interesting stats along the gender divide, suggesting that women tend to stop biking in middle-age, while men continue to ride on into later life.

The majority of female cyclists are between 25 and 44, and prefer quieter routes, while men – who tend to cycle on main roads – continue to ride on to near-retirement, with 30 per cent aged between 45 and 64. Women prefer to use their bikes for commuting, with 70 per cent of their journeys made going to and from work, and while men also like to cycle to work, they are more inclined to use their bikes for social journeys as well, according to stats taken from more than 600 registered riders.

Men's journeys tend to be slightly longer, with an average of 8.6km to women's 7km, and, interestingly, both sexes use their bikes for work-related journeys of an average of 5km. The most popular day of the week to cycle is Tuesday, while the least popular days are Mondays and Fridays.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The ultimate aim of this app is to collect enough data to continue to make cycling in Hackney as easy and as simple as possible."

"But we're also accumulating really interesting data about who is cycling in our borough and why. The more info we have about who, why and where people are travelling, the better we can plan our future transport provision and encourage those not cycling to get pedalling."

"Although the app was designed for cyclists, it's helping to improve the roads for everyone."

Martin Lucas-Smith, from CycleStreets, which developed the app for the Council, added: "The app will help identify streets and paths heavily used for everyday cycle journeys, as well as letting people report problems on the network. You can use it to help the Council improve cycle infrastructure that will enable more people to cycle."

The fashion lab launched on 20 October at The Trampery, London Fields. It provides fashion designers with access to state-of-the-art equipment

Fashion forward

The fashion lab offers emerging designers a creative space to access specialist machinery

TOP names in fashion have joined forces with the Council to help budding designers access state-of-the-art equipment.

The Trampery Fashion Lab is a clean, bright, modern and spacious environment which has been set up to offer shared work space for up-and-coming designers.

Based at social enterprise the Trampery, in Mare Street, the lab provides graduates and young fashion designers with the opportunity to use the latest professional equipment to develop the skills and collections necessary to forge successful careers in the industry.

“Now, for the first time, designers like myself will have access to machinery at an affordable price”

Budding designer Gillian, who attended a launch event on 20 October, said: “I’m starting my own fashion brand so this space is great for testing different fabrics and designs. It’s good that the Council is supporting this space; it’s important for graduate designers.”

Charlie May, a young fashion designer who has her studio at the Trampery, added: “The fashion lab is a wonderful idea, as a young designer it’s impossible to get your hands on the kind of equipment that you had access to in university, and that you need in order to create to the best of your ability.

“Now, for the first time, designers like myself will have access to machinery at an affordable price, which is incredibly exciting.”

The space boasts high-tech and professional equipment such as industrial quality sewing and overlock machines, a fusing press, ironing stations, pattern cutting tables and other machinery.

The fashion lab also includes skilled technicians who are on-hand to give designers technical support and training.

Fashion bible Vogue magazine said the opening of the lab meant ‘Hackney is increasing its fashion-hub status by the day’.

Charles Armstrong, Founder of The Trampery, added: “The amazing calibre of designers based at The Trampery London Fields is a sign of Hackney’s increasing importance as a focal point for the UK fashion industry.”

Member for Regeneration, concluded: "Access to design and manufacturing equipment is a real challenge for anyone starting a career in any design-led industry, it holds back new talent and new ideas struggle to find the light of day."

"The Trampery Fashion Lab addresses this by providing that access and is a welcome addition to the offer that Hackney has for nurturing innovation and creativity. The collaboration behind the fashion lab has been crucial in enabling this project and once again shows how by coming together we can create opportunities for the next generation of small start up businesses in Hackney's expanding economy."

The Trampery collaborated with the Designer-Manufacturer Innovation Support Centre and the Centre for Fashion Enterprise to create the lab with match-funding from the Council.

The work space can be booked online in two hour slots at an affordable price. The funds will be reinvested in additional equipment for the lab, training for designers and other business support.

Master of illusion

Artist and designer Alex Chinneck stands in front of 'Telling The Truth Through False Teeth', in Tudor Road, E9; a derelict warehouse with 312 identically smashed windows using 1,248 pieces of glass

ALEX Chinneck's London Fields flat is exactly what you'd expect from an artist: cosy and welcoming, tasteful and calm. The kettle whistles on the stove and his five-week-old baby gurgles in the corner as we sit down to talk about Alex's latest mind-boggling projects: a floating Victorian market and a melting house.

Alex creates large-scale outdoor public sculptures which combine the disciplines of art, design, architecture, theatre and 'magic.' He is not only one of the youngest members of the Royal British Society of Sculptors, but also the latest in a line of designers and artists, including Damien Hirst and Jeff Koons, commissioned to create public artwork in the Covent Garden Piazza.

Alex says: "I like making three-dimensional projects and experiences. I don't just approach these installations as an artist, I consider different creative disciplines. I'm interested in art, of course, and sculpture – but also architecture, engineering and theatre.

"The projects I work on involve multi-disciplinary interests. Many of the principles that made me fall in love with art remain, it's the output that has changed.

"My work is very audience-driven and a bit of a show-off. The installations are simple in concept, but playful, and compliment a public environment."

"Take my Lightning but Don't Steal my Thunder", in Covent Garden, is certainly causing a stir: the Victorian market portico looks like it has been broken apart and left hanging in mid-air.

Meanwhile 'A Pound of Flesh For 50p', in Southwark, is currently in the process of disappearing. It is a full-sized, two-storey house made of 7,200 wax bricks, which, each night, are heated by hot air. Every morning the house shrinks a little, with the wax puddle growing underneath, until the house disappears.

"Hackney is a very eclectic place: the architecture, the people and the cuisine. I absolutely love living here"

Other architectural optical illusions Alex has worked on include a sliding house in Margate and an upside down house in Blackfriars. But the project Alex is most proud of is based here in Hackney.

"Telling The Truth Through False Teeth", in Tudor Road, E9, is a derelict warehouse with 312 identically smashed windows using 1,248 pieces of glass. The project was Alex's first outdoor public piece. He says: "This piece represents a real turning point in my career. I really like the fact that it started in Hackney.

"I love the building because it is so symmetrical and the windows dominate the façade. It was the perfect fit because the building was so dilapidated anyway that the introduction of smashed glass is harmonious with it. It allows the work to be easily missed – and I do think subtlety is as important as spectacle."

Alex's work is very audience-driven. He creates physically demanding pieces of work, involving construction workers, architects and theatre designers. So how does he go about it?

Alex says: "My projects are five per cent creative, 95 per cent administration. There is always a large process of engineering. I work in partnership with structural, mechanical and hydraulic engineers just to evolve the concept and to make sure if – and how – it's possible. If we get through that stage, what follows is a process of overcoming obstacles, such as building regulations, planning applications etc. If we get to that point, we start making.

"We're developing a project at the moment for 2016 which is very ambitious and complicated. It's a full-sized windmill which is broken from its brick base. One of the sails is stuck in the ground at a slight angle, so the sails don't turn but the entire building rotates instead. So at 12 o'clock it's 23 metres tall, which is about an eight or nine storey building."

Despite Alex's rigorous schedule and physically demanding work, he still finds sometime to relax at home in Hackney.

Alex says: "I think Hackney is a very eclectic place: the architecture, the people and the cuisine. I absolutely love living here. However much you polish it, it still feels a little bit raw.

"There is an undercurrent of creativity which, although has calmed down, still has a wonderful hangover that suits me and my lifestyle."

"Take My Lightning But Don't Steal My Thunder" is on until 23 October; 'A Pound of Flesh For 50p' is on until the end of the month; and 'Telling The Truth Through False Teeth' is due to be knocked down by the end of the year.

Q: My front garden has started piling up with leaves. It feels like a waste to put them in the rubbish bin, is there any way I can recycle them?

A: Residents can either compost autumn leaves in their gardens or take advantage of the Council's brown bin waste collection scheme.

Composting leaves is as easy as putting them in a bin bag, making holes in the bag, and storing them in a corner of the garden where you can forget about them for 12 months. These leaves will become a rich nutrient – leaf mulch – which can be used to fertilise your garden. If you have too many leaves or would like them to be collected by the Council's free fortnightly garden waste service, call the Hackney Recycling Hotline on: 020 8356 6688.

Purr-fect cats get new homes

1. Radish & Milly; 2. Lola; 3. Riley; 4. Murray; 5. Monkey

HACKNEY has been recognised as the only local authority in the country that looks after stray cats.

The Council won an RSPCA 'Innovator' award for its pioneering work to protect abandoned moggies. It employs a volunteer Cat Protection Officer who works with charities to rescue and nurse abandoned pets back to health. Over 40 strays have been rescued and re-homed in the past year.

Success stories include a cat which was found with her litter under a bush on Hackney Marshes. A volunteer fostered the cat, now named Ruby, and her kittens. They have now all been successfully re-homed.

“There are a large number of stray and feral cats in the borough... all in need of protection and care”

A tiny male kitten, called Bear, was found with his sister, mother and father in a garden in Clapton. They were also rescued and put into foster homes.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said:

“There are a large number of stray and feral cats in the borough, including pregnant mums and cats with kittens, all in need of protection and care. “My message to anyone thinking of getting a cat, or buying one as a present, is to make sure they can look after it properly. It's important that they are microchipped so that if any cats do end up in our hands they can be quickly reunited with their owners.”

The Council is reminding all cat owners to make sure their cats are neutered and health-checked each year by a vet. Residents who receive benefits can take their pets to a free Blue Cross mobile vet outside Hackney Town Hall every Wednesday.

Eco-friendly scheme to save money, reduce pollutants and improve health

A PIONEERING green project spearheaded by the Council has been hailed as ‘inspirational’ by one of the country’s leading eco thinkers.

Hackney joined forces with Islington and Towers Hamlets councils to help businesses save money, reduce pollutants and improve staff health as part of the launch of the expanded Zero Emissions Network (ZEN).

The councils are offering a series of cash-saving deals and access to free advice and services from travel, energy and eco experts to businesses in and around the Tech City area in Shoreditch.

The network launched on 9 October, at BL_NK, in East Road, where non members got to discuss the project with those who have already joined up, and check-out clean vehicles.

Environmental and ‘The Guardian’ columnist, Tony Juniper, said: “The expansion of ZEN is to be warmly welcomed.

The evening marking the expansion of the network was highly inspirational and a great reminder of the huge power that comes from bringing people together and sharing best practice.”

The launch event marked the end of the recruitment phase in which 250 businesses signed up, including 185 from Hackney. The next phase of the project will see councils working with businesses to implement the measures they are offering.

Hackney Community College students teamed up with industry professionals to come up with innovative mobile app ideas

App-solutely digital

STUDENTS at Hackney Community College (HCC) teamed up with top IT firms to learn how to develop mobile apps and find out more about working in the interactive media industry.

Each year the British Interactive Media Association (BIMA) arranges an event called D-Day, which sees professional marketers work with young people across the country to help raise awareness of the exciting career opportunities in their industry.

“We decided to make an app that allows you to open and lock parts of the house via your phone”

Companies which worked with HCC this year included global brand, Microsoft Mobile; digital design and communications agency, Bright Lemon; and industry body, Creative Skillset. Students were set the challenge of developing ideas for mobile apps, connected devices and social media applications – before working up branding ideas and presenting their pitches – all against the clock. They benefited from the expertise of professionals who were on hand to advise and help them perfect their ideas.

Jahidur Rahman, 16, who is studying for a diploma in IT, said: “We decided to make an app that allows you to open and lock parts of the house via your phone, like doors and cupboards, and send pictures to your phone of the person trying to get in. Meeting the industry guests has encouraged me to develop my ideas.”

John Johnson, 16, added: “The day was very exciting; the guests were interesting and taught us a lot about the IT and digital industry. The activities we had to complete on the day were challenging. My group created an app idea which was to inform the general public about all things urban. It shows the latest styles, music, activities and news, which is varied depending on the location.”

News in brief

The Urswick goes for gold

THE Urswick School in E9 has been awarded Gold Club status, an accolade which recognises the capital's exceptional schools.

The initiative was set up by the Greater London Authority to help raise standards and attainment for all schoolchildren, regardless of their background.

The award celebrates schools that are helping all their students achieve academic success, particularly those who have previously struggled with school work.

Headteacher Richard Brown (pictured below) said:

“Being awarded London Schools Gold Club status is fantastic recognition of the work we do.

“Our students make exceptional achievements, whatever their starting points, especially those students who live or have lived in poverty.”

Keep clear on road markings

CHILDREN from 24 primary schools across the borough have been chosen by the Council to act as road safety champions this academic year.

The Junior Road Safety Officers will promote general road safety messages, as well as encourage walking and cycling to and from school following training at Hackney Museum. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: “We hope motorists will take heed of the safety messages being asked of them and help make the roads safer for all.”

Each year, the Council's road safety team awards one school a trophy for contributions to road safety. St Matthias Primary School, Stoke Newington, was recognised for innovative ideas in promoting road safety this year.

Blue Peter gardener Chris Collins with schoolchildren

Roll up, roll up – get your seasonal fruit and veg

A GROUP of Hackney schoolchildren became green-fingered traders for the day, running their own stall at Borough Market, as part of the Southwark venue's 1,000th year anniversary celebrations.

Eight-year-olds Mahdi Mohaued, Yahya Ani and Priya Makakor, from Orchard Primary School, E9, grew produce such as salad, beetroot and tomatoes with the help of Blue Peter gardener Chris Collins.

They then set up a stall to sell their seasonal produce at the market on 2 October, alongside children from neighbouring boroughs.

The event was the culmination of a partnership between Borough Market and School Food Matters, a charity that aims to ensure that children enjoy fresh, sustainable food at school and understand where their food comes from.

All proceeds from the day's sales were donated to FareShare, a charity that seeks to relieve food poverty by rescuing good food that would otherwise go to waste.

Keith Davis, managing director of Borough Market, said: “For 1,000 years, traders have gathered on the south side of the river to buy and sell their wares.

“Today, the next generation are trying their hands at being market traders for the day, selling fruit and veg they have grown themselves.”

Have your say on The Future of Transport in Hackney 2014-2024

Hackney Council wants to hear from local people about its new proposals outlined in the draft Hackney Transport Strategy 2014-2024.

Proposals include:

- Improving the pedestrian environment in our town centres
- Securing better and more accessible public transport
- Improving the safety of our streets, public places and roads

- Maintaining and enhancing our position as London's 'Cycling Borough'
- Enhancing Hackney's most popular public spaces.

'Don't Stop The Music', run by Immediate Theatre, is an inter-generational history project made by 12 to 19-year-olds

Don't stop the music

A DOCUMENTARY filmed by young residents is to be distributed to Hackney schools as a learning resource.

'Don't Stop The Music', run by Immediate Theatre, is an inter-generational history project created by 12 to 19-year-olds. It explores what their parents and grandparents' experience of 'going out dancing' in Hackney was from the 1950s onwards.

Stories captured cover tales from the Caribbean to Soho, from Nigerian drums to the Hokey Cokey, and ballroom to drum and bass.

“The project gets families to talk and ask questions I didn't get to ask my parents”

Tony Gouveia, associate director at Immediate Theatre, said: “The project got young people to ask questions about their parents. A lot of them were surprised to find out their parents had previous lives, and that they went to jazz funk clubs and reggae concerts.

“It gets families to talk and ask questions I didn't get to ask my parents, and that is what inspired me to devise this project.”

The documentary process gave the young people a chance to develop a better understanding of their own heritage. It also gave them basic media skills as they learnt how to conduct research, interview and film subjects and edit the results.

A launch event for the film is set to take place on 22 October at Hackney Picturehouse, from 6pm.

In partnership with youth media organisation, Mouth That Roars, the film is accompanied by an education pack, which will be released with a DVD and distributed free of cost for everyone at the launch. 'Don't Stop The Music' is supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Half-term fun for young people

A HALF-term sports camp for young people, aged seven to 13, is set to be held at SPACE Community Sports Centre in Hoxton from 27 to 31 October.

The SHEL kids multi-sport camp runs activities including football, basketball, rounders, hockey, ice skating, tennis, dance, talent shows, bowling and much more. Coaching is available in each sport.

The camp also provides information on health, education and positive living, with sessions on gangs, staying away from crime, and how to have discipline and respect for yourself and others.

The SHEL camp costs £8 per day (10am-3pm), or £12 (9am-5pm), or £40 for the week. To register, visit: www.shelprogramme.co.uk/index.php/register; or call: 020 8257 6816.

Be a health peer researcher

TEN young residents are being offered the chance to train as peer researchers for a health and wellbeing project run by the Council.

Participants, aged 13 to 18, will use Facebook and Twitter to engage with other young people on health issues, and help devise a social media strategy to collect views. Participants will be provided with a certificate at the end of the project.

The scheme is run by the Association for Young People's Health on behalf of the Council. A training day will take place on 28 October, from 12noon-4pm, at Young Hackney, Forest Road, E8. Applicants must be available to work flexible hours in November and December.

For more info, or to sign up, e-mail: behealthy@youngpeopleshealth.org.uk with your name, age, postcode (applicants must be a resident or go to school/college in Hackney) and answer the question: 'Why will you make a good peer researcher on health issues?'

Five Hackney Homes apprentices launch their careers in construction

FIVE bright and enthusiastic young people have joined a Hackney Homes apprenticeship scheme hoping to launch a career in the construction industry.

The successful candidates were selected from 96 applicants for a place on the latest round of the scheme. They will work alongside qualified operatives and attend college to gain the necessary skills and knowledge to qualify in their chosen field.

Since the launch of the scheme in 2001, over 66 apprentices have taken part, with 70 per cent securing full time employment with Hackney

Homes on completion of their apprenticeship.

Electrical apprentice, Harcharan Singh-Lohia, 17, was one of the five selected. He said: “This is an exciting opportunity for me to complete this course and find out more about the electrical trade. Learning on the job is a great way to meet other people, get mentored and get up to speed about the industry I'm interested in.”

Cllr Philip Glanville, Lead Member for Housing, added: “This is a great scheme that gives young people the incentive and practical experience necessary to move towards future job prospects.”

The apprenticeship scheme is open to residents aged between 16 and 18, and lasts from two to four years, depending on the trade. Vacancies this year were in the electrical, gas, and multi-trade fields.

Around 40 older residents from the New Age Games programme tried out a range of sports at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park

New age, new sports

OLDER residents were given the chance to relive the magic of the 2012 Games during an excursion to Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, courtesy of the Council.

A tour of the aquatics and tennis centres, a ride around the VeloPark and coaching in Paralympic activities were just some of the activities enjoyed by the 40-strong group. They are participants in the Council's New Age Games programme, which provides free sports and fitness activities for residents aged over 50.

“We had a great time getting the chance to try out the sports activities in the park”

Hazel Frazer, who went on the tour, said: “I found the day thoroughly enjoyable and informative. I had such fun being taught how to play boccia and sitting volleyball.”

Sandy Doherty added: “This was a well-organised, fun-filled day. We had a great time getting the chance to try out the sports activities in the park.”

For the majority of the group, it was their first time visiting the 560-acre park which extends into Hackney Wick.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park is a world-class resource right on our doorstep with lots of affordable activities available every day.

“This tour of the facilities showed residents how easy it is for them to visit the park and we hope they will now return independently.”

The day trip was part of the New Life Through Sport project, funded by Sport England, East London NHS Foundation Trust, and the Council. It encourages people to participate in physical activity.

Here come the (sporting) girls

GETTING women and girls fired-up about fitness was the aim of free sports taster sessions which took place at Clissold Leisure Centre.

Ballet, aerobics, hula-hooping, netball, football and basketball were just some of the activities on offer.

The event was part of the ‘For The Girls’ programme, run by leisure provider Better, in partnership with the Council and funded by Sport England, which aims to motivate women and girls aged 14 and over to take up sport. Following the taster evening, 75 people signed-up to the programme which is designed and run by women.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “The taster event was really successful. Organisers talked to more than 200 people, including students and local women’s groups who asked that we include more activities such as badminton and tone-up classes.”

Ex-Olympian and ‘For The Girls’ ambassador Jade Jackson attended the event on 23 September.

She said: “The project is all about getting women and girls excited about exercise and supporting them to grow in confidence and to do activities together with like-minded people.”

The winter schedule has begun, offering aqua jogging, netball, basketball and running for £2.50 per session at various Hackney leisure centres. For more info, or to get involved, visit: www.better.org.uk/forthegirls

£300k community fund launched to boost Hackney’s health and happiness

A NEW grants scheme has been launched by the Council to provide community and voluntary groups with funding for innovative health projects.

The Healthier Hackney Fund is a £300,000 pot of money which will be allocated to community groups that can show how their project can make an impact on tackling some of the borough’s biggest health challenges.

There are three types of grant which groups can apply for. Healthy Activities: provides up to £30,000 to run practical activities that will prevent people from starting smoking or improve mental health; Healthy Ideas: up to £8,000 to develop a new approach to tackle problems relating to substance misuse or sexual health; and Healthy Neighbourhoods: £1,000 for projects that get residents to encourage each other to be healthy.

Groups will also receive on-going support from Council public health staff to maximise the impact of their projects through their specialist skills, knowledge and connections.

The fund was launched on 30 September at BL_NK in Shoreditch. Speakers on the day included Dr Penny Bevan, the Council’s Director of Public Health;

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture; and Jake Ferguson, Chief Executive of Hackney CVS.

Applications for funding close on 19 December. For more info, or to apply for a grant, visit: news.hackney.gov.uk/healthier-hackney-fund

Exterior and interior views of the John Scott Health Centre, Green Lanes, 1952; Opening of the refurbished centre as the John Scott Health Centre by Minister of Health Rt. Hon. Kenneth Robinson MP, 22 October 1965

Great Scott! A new health centre

By Sally England

A PIONEERING health centre, built to serve residents of the new Woodberry Down Estate, was described as 'a test tube experiment embodying the principle that disease can only be prevented by the maintenance of health.'

These were the words of Labour MP for Barking, Dr Somerville Hastings, at the official opening of London County Council's (LCC) first ever health centre on 14 October, 1952.

It took three years to build, with its innovative design employing large quantities of glass, concrete, brick and wood to compensate for a post-war shortage of steel.

The two-storey C-shaped plan brought together different areas of health care provision under one roof to provide a comprehensive service: general medical and dental, school health, child welfare, ante-natal, remedial and child guidance.

The child welfare unit included a playroom for toddlers and parking for prams, as well as a lecture room and demonstration kitchen, where new mothers could learn about infant care and nutrition.

Separate entrances for the units prevented patients from feeling herded together and there was also an isolation room.

At the opening ceremony the Minister of Health, Iain McLeod, stated that teamwork between the different units would be the greatest asset of the revolutionary new centre, and that the world would watch it with interest. Dr Hastings highlighted what he felt would be an essential quality of the centre: the continuance of personal links between patients and doctors, as well as hoping that 'great knowledge would come from the centre where doctors specialising in all different types of disease and cure were gathered together.'

“Great knowledge would come from the centre where doctors specialising in all different types of disease... gathered”

In practice, however, the GPs tended to keep themselves to themselves and still retained their own surgeries where they continued to see most of their patients. Within three years the Government had abandoned the idea of creating further expensive health centres, based on the Woodberry Down model, instead offering funding to GPs to create their own smaller group practices.

Control of the centre passed from the LCC to the newly-formed London Borough of Hackney in 1965, and the opportunity was taken to rename it after John Scott, the former LCC Medical Officer for Health, who had been closely involved in designing the building. A ceremony to mark this took place on 22 October 1965, with a plaque unveiled by Minister of Health, the Rt Hon Kenneth Robinson MP. Organisational changes in the 1970s returned its management to the NHS.

New preventative medical services were developed over subsequent years, including a successful family-planning service, disability resource centre and diabetic day centre. During the housing crisis of the 1980s, the John Scott Centre also ran a much-needed unit treating homeless people living in hostels or on the streets.

Today the spirit of that work continues at the centre with The Sanctuary, one of the country's first medical practices dedicated to the complex problems presented by homeless and asylum-seeking patients.

Inevitably alterations and additions have been made to the building, including a comprehensive remodelling programme in the late 1990s, but much of the original layout and fabric survives intact, confirming the centre's design as being not only fit for purpose but also flexible and adaptable, still providing front-line health services to an ever-increasing local population.

In fact, its importance in the history of modern health care as well as its innovative planning and high quality design has led the centre to be Grade II listed. This helped to stop proposed plans in 2006 to demolish the centre and replace it with an eight-storey development.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Recipes straight from the Eat Hackney Cookbook

www.eathackney.com/cookbook

Eat Hackney Cookbook features 30 great recipes from restaurants, cafés and community projects in Hackney. Proceeds go to the Hackney Migrant Centre and North London Action for the Homeless, who feed 100 vulnerable people each week in the borough.

THIS issue's recipe is taken from the Eat Hackney Cookbook, which features food from around the world. Its sale raises funds for two small local charities which work to feed the homeless and vulnerable: the Hackney Migrant Centre and North London Action for the Homeless. The Cookbook costs £5, with all funds going to the charities. For more info on where to buy a copy, visit: eathackney.com/cookbook

Pear and cardamom chutney

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
1.5 hours

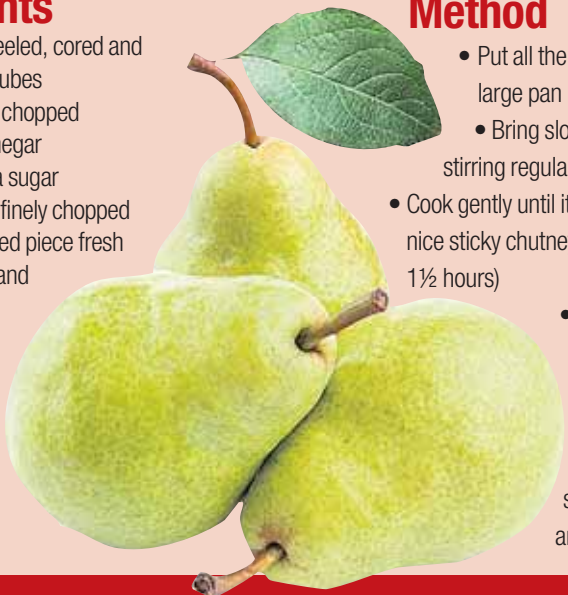

YOU'LL need to sterilise the jars: wash jars and lids in soapy water and rinse. Drip-dry upside down in the oven (set at 140°C) for 30 minutes. If you are putting warm chutney into jars, ensure the jars are warm; if the chutney is cold the jars should be cold too.

Ingredients

- 750g pears, peeled, cored and chopped into cubes
- 2 onions, finely chopped
- 300ml cider vinegar
- 250g demerara sugar
- 3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 5cm thumb-sized piece fresh ginger, peeled and grated
- 3 tsp ground cardamom
- 2 tsp mustard seeds
- 3 tsp cinnamon
- 1 tsp salt.

Method

- Put all the ingredients into a large pan
- Bring slowly to the boil, stirring regularly
- Cook gently until it thickens to a nice sticky chutney consistency (1 to 1½ hours)
- Make sure it doesn't stick to the bottom of the pan
- Spoon into sterilised jars and seal.

Patchwork Preserves is a collaboration between local veg box suppliers Growing Communities and North London Action for the Homeless. Growing Communities donate their surplus veg to the NLAH kitchen. What isn't used is then turned into organic chutneys and pickles, which are sold to support the charity.

Have your say on the housing situation in Hackney

RESIDENTS' views are needed on whether new housing meets local demand amid rising prices and private rents.

The survey is being undertaken by the Living in Hackney Scrutiny Commission, which is made up of councillors who investigate issues of local concern. The type of new homes being built in the borough – by housing associations, private developers and the Council – depends on planning and housing guidelines.

This includes a Hackney target that 50 per cent of new homes should be made available at lower than market cost.

The commission is looking into whether these guidelines and targets are effective, or not, in delivering new homes for social renting, for example.

The commission is keen to hear residents' views on the housing market in Hackney; the approach the Council should take towards new housing developments; and whether residents would support the Council in asking the Government for further powers to control the kind of housing being built.

Other areas for examination include how effective national, London-wide and local planning policy and regulations are in ensuring homes for social renting and shared ownership are built as part of new private housing developments; and the funding challenges that housing associations face.

Following the review, the commission will consider all the information gathered and present it clearly. Any lessons learnt will be used to help suggest how things might be done differently.

The deadline for responses is 11 December. To take part, visit: <https://consultation.hackney.gov.uk/overview-and-scrutiny/new-housing-development>
